ABSTRACT

This bibliography, the first one to be generated by the computer system of the Linguistics Documentation Centre, lists books and articles through 1972. Entries are not annotated, but additional descriptors are noted for many publications. Many entries are recorded as being abstracted and indexed in the ERIC system, and for these ERIC reference numbers are included. Most publications are in English; some entries are in French or German. (CHK)

Introductory Note

I venture to hope that this bibliography, compiled in response to an urgent request from Prof. G. Rondeau, presents a double interest: first its intrinsic value as a reference tool, secondly the fact that it is the first bibliography produced by the Linguistics Documentation Centre of the University of Ottawa.

Here are some technical details of its production. It was entered from an IBM 2741 terminal with EBCD keyboard into the University's IBM 360/65 computer via the ATS/OS system. The 2741 is a modified IBM Selectric typewriter. ATS is a general-purpose system for text editing. The EBCD keyboard is not however the most suitable one available: we shall shortly switch to a 'Correspondence' keyboard, which has the French accents that we have been obliged to leave out here. We thank Prof. T.R. Hofmann for training us in the use of ATS and helping us appreciate its potential[1].

The version of the bibliography reproduced here is a listing via the Computer Centre's highspeed printer. It is in a format edited for publication by removing the special symbols that we use in the input to mark the boundaries of each bibliographic entry and to delimit several fields within the entry: author field, date field, title field, etc. We employed ATS for the editing too. ATS is proving very useful for this work, although it has few drawbacks: for example we have abandoned the underlining of titles because we find the ATS underlining procedure too tricky.

Our input format, details of which will be supplied on request, is determined not by the output format shown here but by the exigencies of a permuted-index program which is being written for us by the Applications Department of the University Computer Centre[2]. This format differs from the MARC format which the National Library of Canada Task Force has recently recommended for Canadian machine-readable catalogues[3]. We judge that our needs differ from theirs: thus we include some information which they have not allowed for, such as additional descriptors. Nevertheless we trust that our flagging of fields and our control of our meta-vocabulary would allow easy translation from our format into theirs should it ever be required.

2. Details will be given in our bulletin Communiqué when the program is ready. In a permuted index, bibliographic descriptions are printed under every significant word ('key word') they contain, the key words themselves being listed in alphabetical order. For example, Chomsky, Syntactic Structures, will be listed as follows:

Chomsky: Chomsky, Syntactic Structures
Structures: Chomsky, Syntactic Structures
Syntactic: Chomsky, Syntactic Structures

3. Canadian MARC. A Report of the Activities of the MARC Task Group Resulting in a Recommended Canadian MARC for Monographs and a Canadian MARC Format for Serials. Ottawa: National Library, 1972. MARC was instituted by the Library of Congress for its tapes and then adopted and adapted by several other national bibliographies. Our remark applies equally to the ISBD (International Standard Book Description), which is the recent outcome of this process of internationalizing MARC. For the present state of ISBD in Canada, see M. Ouimet, 'L'Actualité en bibliothéconomie: I.S.B.D.' Nouvelles de l'ACBIF, nos. 73-74 (Feb.-March, 1973), pp. 29-33.
